

Loyola Law School's Center for the Study of Law & Genocide To Examine Eichmann War-Crime Trial

Hon. Gabriel Bach, Israeli prosecutor, to deliver keynote address and receive honor

LOS ANGELES – Loyola Law School's Center for the Study of Law & Genocide (CSLG) will examine the historic Israeli trial of Nazi officer Adolf Eichmann for his role in the Holocaust during the symposium "Perspectives on Genocide: The Adolf Eichmann Trial – Looking Back 50 Years Later," featuring a keynote presentation by the Hon. Gabriel Bach, deputy prosecutor in the 1961 trial. Top international Eichmann and Holocaust experts will assess the importance and impact of what has been described as "the greatest trial of the 20th Century." The event will be held from 9:30 a.m.-5:15 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 16 on Loyola's downtown L.A. campus.

"The half-century that has passed since the trial of Adolf Eichmann has only succeeded in recognizing the trial's remarkable impact upon both international criminal justice and the memory of the Holocaust," said Professor Stan Goldman, director of the CSLG. And there will be a special screening of the documentary Memories of the Eichmann Trial at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 14 at 7 p.m.
